Land Grants in 1776.

Back in 1776 the Continental Congress passed a resolution promising public lands to officers and soldiers who should engage in the service or their representatives if slain by the enemy. This was the origin of bounties of land from the United States for war services.

The amounts promised also provide interesting comparisons.

Representative and Mrs. J. Charles Linthicum spent the holiday at At-Colonels were granted 500 acres. majors 400, captains 300, lieutenants 200 and noncommissioned officers and enlisted men 100 each. This was later amended to give major gen-erals 1,100 acres and brigadiers 850 Col. and Mrs. Sherman Miles will leave shortly for Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where Col. Miles has been ordered for duty.

In compliance with these legislative promises the Continental Congress, by an act approved June 1. 1796, set apart for the location of bounties for the officers and men serving in the Revolutionary War a tract of land containing about 4,000 square miles, or 2,500,000 acres, embracing in whole or part twelve counties in Northern Ohio, and counties in Northern Onio, known as the United States Mili-

In 1811 and 1812 Congress promised land bounties for service during the war with Great Britain 6,000,000 acres being appropriated in Illinois, Missouri and Louisiana territories. The object of the grants in these then remote sections was to induce settlement and cultivation in these then remote sections was to induce settlement and cultivation of the land. For services in the war of 1812 there were issued 29,186 warrants embracing about 4.853,600 Bright Lauds Entrance of warrants embracing about being for 160 acres each, though there were many double bounties of 320 acres

The war with Mexico was proclaimed May 13, 1846, and February 11, 1847, an act was passed giving In subsequent acts safeguards were thrown out to protect the ex-soldiers, the most comprehensive act being that of 1855, which covered almost all the wars the United States had participated in and made it possible for any officer and man who had served to secure 160 acres by removing many restrictions of previous acts. Under this act serv.

The total number of warrants issued under all the acts was over half a million, embracing 61,028,430 This is more than twice the area of Ohio or Pennsylvania, and a million more acres than all of the New England States, with New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware thrown

A M P L Y SECURES AMERICA'S CLAIMS

Half Billion Held Is More Than Double Amounts Demanded.

The American government may counter new difficulties with the allies when an effort is made to settle the claims of citizens of this

The allies, it is pointed out, hold a first mortgage on all German assets for the payment of reparations. Large payments to be made to America, it is thought, might raise objections similar to those sur-rounding America's attempt to collect the $241,000,000 owed for the maintenance of the army on the

Since this government did not ratify the treaty of Versailles, util-ization of the international machinery provided for the settlement of claims is not possible. In the same way, America's claim for the Rhine army was passed up because this government was not a member of the reparations commission, which is charged with allotment of the gold marks paid by Germany.

Lone Game Difficult.

It is the intention of this govern ment to settle its claims against Germany directly, through a mixed tribunal on which will be repre-sentatives of both nations. The tribunal would adjudicate the claims, and then it would be up to Germany to pay. This might be dif-ficult, because the allies are already demanding payments in larger sums than Germany has ever been able to Claims of American citizens arise chiefly from the unrestricted subma-rine warfare before America be-came a belligerent. The most considerable group arose from the sinking of the Lusitania. Other claims property in Germany and in areas where there was fighting. The to-tal of the claims is not accurately known, but they will amount to something like $200,000,000. Compilations are on file with the State Department, but it is thought that many of the demands were submit-ted in larger amounts than the claimants actually hoped to obtain.

Security More Than Ample. American citizens are assured payment, however, through the fact that this government still retains some half billion dollars' worth of alien property sequestered during the war. The property is held and administered by the alien property custodian, and the resolution of peace with Germany specifically provides for its retention until all claims are settled.

Not that the government will dispose of this property to settle claims if it can be avoided. Rather, there impossible, the property could be used. Then it would be up to the German government to reimburse its own nationals.

Sex Frankness Urged by Church

Leicester under the chairmanning of the Archbishop of York.

Supporting this idea, Dr. Leonard F. Brown, medical officer of Knutsford Test School, declared that women's
